What Your Town [Marshfield] Looked Like on Penny Postcards

From Dick Eastman's Blog, June 23, 2015 and the Don Schnitzler Postcard Collection

Years ago, postcards cost 1¢ to mail within the U.S. Postage was temporarily raised to 2¢ from 1917 to 1919 to cover the cost of World War I and the increase was rescinded after the War. In 1952, the required postage was raised to two cents and has slowly escalated ever since. Today, mailing a postcard cost 34¢. (Reference: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/History\_of\_United\_States\_postage\_rates)

Over the years, many postcards were printed with view of a town or other area, then sold in stores within that town or area. Many of these postcards have been preserved and often provide an interesting glimpse of what life was like in "the good old days." Possibly your ancestors saw these same views in person.

USGenWeb has a rather good collection of penny postcards available online. The scenes vary from pictures of the downtown business area to residences to schools to people at work. Railroads seem to be featured often in these old pictures.

You can view the USGenWeb collection of postcards at <http://www.usgwarchives.net/special/ppcs/ppcs.html>. Click on the state and then on the county name to see old penny picture postcards from that area.

President's Message

Dear Friends,

With one season following another this year seems to have been racing by too quickly. Just think, in only a few weeks the autumnal equinox will arrive to bring an end to summer and the start of fall. We can look forward to dropping temperatures and increasingly shorter daylight hours, as well an assortment of interesting programs and events for our Marshfield Area Genealogy Group friends.

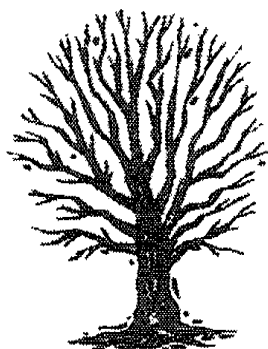

The first event on the calendar is the fall "Wienie Roast" at Noreen Moen's country estate. Grab a lawn chair, a dish to pass and a favorite beverage for an evening of good cheer. Directions will follow by email soon. Until that arrives, mark your calendar for Thursday, September 17th at 6 pm.

Then a "major" event happening right here in town is the upcoming Wisconsin State Genealogical Society Fall Conference on October 17th at the Hotel Marshfield. Our group is the host society this year so we'll need several volunteers to help with registration Saturday morning, and then a few others to help throughout the day in the speaker's room or at lunchtime collecting dinner tickets. The speaker, Thomas MacEntee, besides being recognized nationally as a genealogical expert, is a down-to-earth and enjoyable presenter to listen too. The conference theme, "Connecting the Dots" is something we all can benefit from. Check out the Wisconsin State Genealogical Society website (wsgs.org) for more information, or bring your questions to our September meeting.

There just two regular MAGG meetings remaining for this calendar year. The discussion at our September meeting will focus on using digital newspaper collections for your family history research. We will also scan photos of our veteran ancestors for sharing during our October meeting, when we will all have time to share stories, artifacts or information about the veteran ancestors in our family trees. Please plan on attending and participating in both discussions. Just a reminder too, if you have suggestions on how the genealogy group can better serve your needs in anyway, just let me know.

As always,

Schnitz

Index to French Canadian Revolutionary War Patriots

Dick Eastman's Blog · July 13, 2015

American schoolchildren all learn about our glorious ancestors who fought for American independence in 1776 and for a few years following the Declaration of Independence. However, the history books published in the U.S. rarely mention that the desire for independence was not unanimous. Many Americans and Canadians wanted to remain loyal to the King of England they are generally referred to as Loyalists. While discredited in the U.S., these same Loyalists are considered to be heroes by the Canadians. In fact, Canadian history books generally devote more pages to the Loyalists than to those who fought for independence. Likewise, many Canadians supported the Patriot cause even though they lived north of what is now the U.S.-Canadian border.

Not all combatants were from the 13 original colonies. Many were from what is now known as Canada and more than a few were of French-Canadian ancestry. Debbie Duay of Fort Lauderdale, Florida has compiled an index to French Canadian Revolutionary War patriots from Quebec that appear in the Baby, Taschereau, and Williams journal and/or Virginia Easley DeMarce's "Canadian Participants in the American Revolution – An Index." Her index appears at <http://www.learnwebskills.com/patriot/frenchcanadianpatriots.htm>. The index lists the names of French-Canadian Patriots and their wives.

There are many different types of Marshfield postcards that have been printed and collected over the years. As the article says, “many postcards were printed with a view of a town or other area.”

Marshfield was not any different, as there were pictures of specific buildings, businesses, street scenes, (either from an actual photo or as a lithograph) and sometimes, even people. There were generic postcards that had a picture of a cow pasture, a bear, etc. that simply said “Greetings From Marshfield, WI). And then there were humorous cartoon types that usually didn’t have any connection to the Marshfield location at all, except having the words, “Marshfield, Wisconsin” printed in the corner.

An important thing to remember is that these postcards can give you an idea of what our city (or any city, for that matter) looked like through the eyes of what our ancestors might have seen. Places change over time and postcards are a way to document these changes. (Refer to the article on the Blodgett Hotel that ran in the Wisconsin State Genealogical Society Newsletter, Vol. 60, Issue 1, January 2014 and also the QR Code Story on the Blodgett Hotel/Tremont Hotel on our website at http://www.marshfieldgenealogy.com/Blodgett\_Hotel.pdf).

Another thing to keep in mind is that postcards can be used to date buildings, businesses, etc. in a town. Not only by using the cancellation date on the postcard, but also looking at who issued the postcard and the postage rate used to send the card. In an article, “Picture the past at your convenience” by Smiljka Kitanovic, PhD, in the National Genealogical Society (NGS) Magazine, Vol. 38, No. 1, dated January-March 2012, prior to 1898, postcards issued by the government were sent at only one-cent, but postcards issued by a private party cost two-cents to mail.

A little more history that was mentioned in the NGS article:

“Over the past 130 years, many people have collected postcards with a passion. Thanks to this hobby, also known as deltiology, old postcards were preserved, providing us today with insight into scenes of the past.

Copyright for the first privately published postcard was obtained by John P. Charlton of Philadelphia in 1861. However, this plain Postcard also known as Lipman’s postal card, was not widely used. The oldest extant card was postally cancelled 25 October 1870. Austria-Hungary is credited as the first country to successfully introduce the postcard among its citizenry; within three months of publication on 1 October 1869, nearly three million copies were sold. Postcards were adopted by the United States in May 1873, where they also quickly became popular, with sixty million postcards sold within six months.

“Early government-issued postcards were usually image-free, aside from bearing an imprinted stamp. However, in some countries, such as Germany, Austria-Hungary, and Switzerland, picture postcards soon emerged with small images of resorts or hotels printed on cards as headings, in black or brown. Because of postal restrictions, general publication of picture postcards did not begin in the United States until 1893. An 1898 Act of Congress (previously mentioned) established equal postage rates for government-issued and privately published cards, allowing the publication of picture postcards to flourish afterwards. Not surprisingly, it is difficult nowadays to find pre-1898 American picture postcards.”

Many people actually collect post cards, including my husband, Don. If you look at the MAGG website found at: www.marshfieldgenealogy.com, you will see a variety of postcards from his collection, all from Marshfield. We have pulled a few more and are sharing them with you here, in this article. Enjoy!

Where can you find postcards? The next time you go to a garage sale, an estate sale or even the antique shops, look for some of these treasures. Even the internet has many postcards for sale. Check out E-Bay for example and look for Marshfield Postcards.

Postcards can show a specific place in time, specific people or family. Notice the military uniform shirts. (From 1914, with one individual identified, Wm. Pakow, Marshfield, WI.)

A train wreck just north of Marshfield. No postmark on back.

Sometimes, you can't always believe what you see on a postcard. Here you see a trolley on Central Ave. in Marshfield, something that never happened. (Post-marked 1924.)

Harness races at the Wisconsin Central State Fair in Marshfield. (Early 1900's.)

Example of cartoon style postcard. Postmarked 1909. (Available for sale on E-Bay for $19.99)

Irish Catholic Registers go On-line

(From the writers at The In Depth Genealogist, July 23, 2015)

The National Library of Ireland this week launched a website which will make a lot of Irish researchers very happy. The Library's entire collection of microfilms of Catholic parish registers has been put on-line at <http://registers.nli.ie>. The collection contains microfilms of 3,500 registers from 1,086 parishes and is by far the largest collection of such Irish records in existence. The original registers are still in their parish of origin, and only 56 registers are not available for reasons explained in the excellent FAQ section on the site.

There is no index within the site so it is not for those who want quick fixes or instant results. If you just want results, you can access the pay-for site www.rootsireland.ie, which has indexed most of these registers and can tell you if there is a record for the person of interest to you. However, the new site will allow those who are prepared to put in the work to search all of the registers available in the area of interest for your family. Looking through the full registers is useful in getting an impression of the names of your ancestors' neighbors and relatives. These people often turn up in other records.

For those of us who have spent time spooling our way through reels of microfilm on clunky old readers, this is major progress. No more breaks in film, or finding that the previous user has rewound the film the wrong way around. In addition, it can be accessed from your own home. The software also has a range of image enhancement options which allows the reader to better decipher some of the more cryptic writing within the registers. You can also print the images.

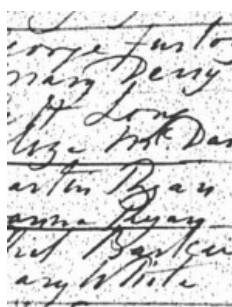

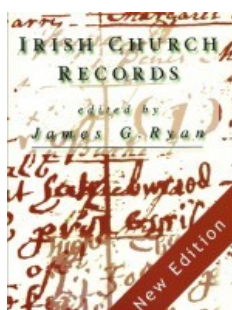

The site is well laid out and has a lot of useful features. There are name variations among parishes (e.g. Glinn and Glynn) and also names which are common to two parishes (e.g. there are 2 Dromores and 2 Glinks). The site provides prompts to ensure that you have the correct parish, and also provides very useful maps so you can readily identify all of the parishes within an area. It will also allow you to easily identify the neighboring parishes in the event you need to extend your search. Similarly for the larger cities, there are maps showing the location of the major parish churches within each. This can be very useful if you are trying to decide which parish your urban ancestor might have attended.

Remember, the original registers are not always strictly chronologically arranged. Some parishes kept several registers during certain periods (perhaps maintained by different priests). The site clearly lists all of the microfilms within each parish (and the dates of the records they contain) to ensure you can see all of the material available in your period of interest. There is also a contact email for queries.

Some of these records are already indexed on www.irishgenealogy.ie, a free website which covers Dublin City, Kerry and the Diocese of Cork and Ross. You can therefore search for a record on this site, establish the date and register, and then see the original record by accessing the <http://registers.nli.ie>. Equally, you can access the www.rootsireland.ie site to find a record of your ancestor, but it will cost you a small amount. If you find a record, you can then access the new website to see (and print) the original record. If you are interested in learning more about the background to the compilation of Catholic registers, including why records may not exist, and why your ancestor might not be recorded, there is a full account in Irish Church Records, published by Flyleaf Press.

Note from one of the In Depth Genealogist writers: The illustration shows a typical page layout for a register (in this case the RC Parish of Taghmon, Co. Wexford); and also the record of baptism for my g-grandfather John in Taghmon in April 1844.

Odds and Ends from the 1940's

H.S. Band Invited to '40 World Fair - Expense of Trip to New York Makes Acceptance Prohibitive

The Marshfield High School Band, first division winners at the National School Music Festival at Minneapolis last spring, has been invited to play at the New York World's Fair next summer.

Director Albert H. Schleunes as received letters from Gene LaBarre, bandmaster of the New York City Police Band, and from the fair management inviting is band to visit and play at the fair between May 11 and October 25, 1940.

The fair would provide admission to the grounds and checking facilities for band instruments, but other expenses would be borne by the band.

Because of the tremendous expense involved in such an undertaking, Mr. Schleunes is not considering accepting the invitation. He is of the opinion that a trip to the national contest is a better educational investment, although the possibilities offered by the fair make the trip a very attractive one.

3,700 Receive Social Security Checks Today

Washington - About 3,700 works and their dependents scattered across the country collected today the first monthly benefits on federal old age insurance.

The postmaster's ring, bringing the social security check, will become a familiar routine on the first of every month in thousands of homes. The recipients are wage earners of 65 or over who have retired, along with their wives, widows, children, or dependent parents.

Social security checks have been sent out before as lump sum settlements to estates of deceased workers or to those who were born too soon to qualify for monthly benefits under the original act.

Transfer Students to New School Building Monday

Actual transfer of students to the new Senior High School building will be accomplished on Monday instead of Friday, as previously planned, it was announced today by Supt. E. L. Giroux.

The change in moving plans is due to a number of circumstances which have arisen.

The open house at the new school will be held on Saturday and Sunday as originally scheduled, and the building will be open to the public for inspection on both days from 1 to 9 p.m.

Classes will be held as usual at the Willard D. Purdy building Monday morning, and the students will then be instructed in detail as to moving, which will be accomplished later in the day.

School authorities hope to effect the transfer with as little interruption of class activity as possible, with a minimum amount of confusion.

Proposes Citizenship Day Become Nationwide

Washington - The third Sunday in May of each year would be observed as citizenship recognition day under a resolution adopted by the House yesterday and sent to the Senate.

The resolution, introduced by Rep. Johns (R-Wis), would authorize the President to proclaim an annual citizenship recognition day "as a public occasion for the recognition of all who, by coming of age or naturalization, have attained the status of citizenship."

A citizenship day observation was inaugurated at Manitowoc, Wis., last year. Other Wisconsin communities subsequently adopted the plan.

Library and Archives Canada Now Allows Self-Service Photography of Documents

From Dick Eastman's Blog, June 10, 2015

It used to be that the only way of getting copies of archival documents was a bit of a tedious process. Flagging the pages you wanted copied, filling out the form, handing in the information to the Consultation staff, and then waiting the 30 business days for the copies to be made. If you were not someone who was from the Ottawa-Gatineau area, you would then have to wait for the copies to be mailed out to you. If you were in the National Capital Region, but not a regular visitor, you might have to make a special trip to 395 Wellington Street to pick up your copies. Now the process can be much quicker if you choose. If you have a camera or a smartphone, you can now take digital images of our collection, rights and restrictions permitting. The details may be found at <http://thediscoverblog.com/2015/06/10/self-serve-photography>.
